“Bridging the Generational Divide: How to Form a Transgenerational Movement Towards Social Justice”

Social justice refers to the concept of a society in which justice is achieved in every aspect of society rather than merely the administration of law. Americans, both young and old, deal with multiple social issues daily. These issues impact generations differently. How do we bridge the generational gap? How should we address social profiling? Can the voice of young people be heard as we move toward a just and equal society? We plan to explore all of the aforementioned issues and others in this intergenerational dialogue that is open to the public.
